REPUBLICAN SPECIAL.
Washington, Jan. 28.—President McKinley is much worried over the church struggle in the Philippines. The commission sent to the Far East will attempt to straighten out the ecclesiastical tangle, in the plan agreed upon by the president and the pope. The church property very largely in the municipalities with the understanding that this property shall remain in the hands of the Catholic church. The president and the pope suggested which the President might call upon the Catholic authorities to send a commission to the Philippines to take over this church property and transfer it to the municipalities. If this municipal plan is preferred, as the government municipalities will be enabled to expel the friars or to retain them, as they may see fit. The commission is now in the same standpoint, is embarrassing to the administration, especially as it comes up for consideration on the eve of the president's departure and the president is having a nervous, caution in approaching it.

found to one and rushed into where he found wife asleep. "Come, get up," he said, "we must go to Rose Hill."

His friend tried to dissuade him, but to no purpose. They harnessed a horse to a heavy buggy, took the woman and drove to the cemetery at break-neck speed. As quickly as possible they dug down to the coffin, which had been put there three days before, and they saw the body. The wife was just trudging over in the earth. Although alive, she was unconscious. Fortunately she had been in a sister's care for some time, and she was known to be and is alive to-day. She has no idea that she was ever buried alive, and probably never knew any of the details of the story. There seems to be no other explanation. That is that Mrs. Smith's beloved nephew had influenced the mind of her husband, and he had wanted him out of danger.

"They are the West Point cadets," a marine told him, "and they get only a dollar a month to keep them from their fathers."

Just then the mace-buzzle call sounded. The recruit started and asked what it was.

"It's the signal for an execution. They're going to hang a soldier."

"Who did he do?" the recruit asked green with fear.

"Missed his trick at a wheel," he was informed.

The recruit wringed.

"But that was nothing," said the marine.

BOERS' WONDERFUL ACCURACY

The position thus taken was considered very valuable and surprise was expressed at the enemy weekly surrendering it.

On Wednesday morning, in exceedingly rainy misty weather around the mountain top, we discovered the Boers in strength at the north end of the kop and bullets and shells soon commenced falling like hail.

London, Jan. 29, 4:15 a. m.—Indication that Lord Roberts is preparing plans for an advance across the Orange River comes in a dispatch to the Daily Chronicle from Sterksdroom, dated January 25, which says that that "The Hitts, an important position near Steynsburg, on the Stormburg-Rosme line, is now occupied by the British."

The correspondent observed that this would facilitate communication between General Guevara and General Kelly-Kenny.
